

MEDICAL.

AT CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

Margaret E. Sawyer in Mary's Bazar.
So blithe this hour, when once again
The stars glow steady in the sky;
So hope and joy, when human pain
Grows less, for far that holy night;
So hallowed, when the angel train
With song and harp are passing by.
Once more, between the midnight's gloom
And the pale rays of breaking dawn,
Heaven's matches light and bloom,
And far as west the east are drawn
The patient watchers with their eyes
All the pathways men must journey on.
Ain't the Stars and the Stars
Bend low before a little child;
And over the long and stormy years,
The desert spaces vast and wild,
The stars, the stars, and the stars,
He looks, and smiles, the undimmed.
The Christmas-tide! At Mary's knee
The shepherd's staff and crook meet
Love-bound in dear humility
To clasp the infant Jesus sweet
The Star is bright of old and new,
The Gloria sung is full and sweet.

BOUND FOR THE SOUTH POLE.

Dr. F. A. Cook Will Lead a Party Into Antarctic Waters.

Dr. F. A. Cook, of Brooklyn, the ethnologist of the Peary expedition of 1891-92, is now preparing to lead an exploring party to the antarctic regions next fall. He intends, if he can, to solve the mystery of the antarctic continent or archipelago, which is supposed to spread over a large part of the south polar area.

Dr. Cook proposes to go south with an ample equipment for carrying on his researches under conditions that will be favorable for success. His work in the arctic regions was good and thorough, and he has shown that he possesses those qualities in a high degree which fit him to take the leadership in an expedition to the antarctic regions. Mr. Astrup, who is now with Peary, expects to return in time to go south with Dr. Cook as second in command. The cost of the expedition will be about $50,000.

Dr. Cook has submitted his plans to the American Geographical Society. The New York Sun publishes a summary of his scheme as follows:

"The months for exploration will be December, January, February and March. The expedition will leave New York about September 1. At the Falkland Islands the party will replenish their coal and provision supply. From the Falkland Islands they will steam directly for Terra Louis Philippe. On one of the islands off this coast they will deposit one of their life boats, with provisions enough to reach the Falkland Islands. From Terra Louis Philippe their course will depend much upon the movements of the vast packs of ice drifting around the polar area at the mercy of the prevailing winds and currents, leaving temporary openings in the direction of the continent of the pole. Dr. Cook will take advantage of the first practical opening to enter the ice barrier, and proceed in a southerly direction to the most southern point at which he is able to reach land. There he will search for some harbor for his vessel, establish headquarters and begin systematic scientific observations at once.

"Dr. Cook does not expect to be able to engage in much exploratory work during the antarctic summer of 1894-95, but will be satisfied to get safely into winter quarters. The winter will be spent in all the scientific researches that may be carried out in the neighborhood of his camp. He will take a good supply of dogs with him."

Dr. Cook writes: "Our whole traveling equipment will be tried and perfected during the long night; our clothing will be made almost entirely of furs and bird skins that I brought with me from Greenland last summer. The garments will be cut on the Eskimo pattern and will consist of fur outside garments and bird skin undergarments. I have little faith in knit clothing for these regions, and consider it almost worthless in extremely low temperatures. We shall have an extensive library, from which monthly magazines, weeklies and daily papers will be served at regular intervals.

"As soon as the sun returns our work in the field will begin. The inland party for more southern explorations will then start on their journey across the inland sea; the scientific observations will be continued along the coast, and as much of the coast explored on sledges and in boats as the time before our retreat will permit.

"After the return of the inland party, which will be about the 1st of March, we will at once begin our retreat. We shall use every endeavor to protect our vessel from ice pressure, and try to keep her from being jammed or detained in the ice packs. If we should be so unfortunate as to lose our vessel, our retreat is planned that by the use of a combination of small boats, which we draw over ice, and sledges we will be able to reach our life boat on an island off Louis Philippe Land, and in this cross over to the Falkland Islands.

"After we have crossed the antarctic circle, if the time and weather conditions will permit, we shall endeavor to study the mainland and islands in the region of Terra Louis Philippe. Leaving here, we shall probably reach the Falkland Islands about May 1; from there, after stopping at one or two South American ports, we shall steam direct for New York."

Dr. Cook's party will not number more than twelve or fifteen men, including his ship's crew. His scientific corps will number four or five men, and the other members of the party will be intelligent, educated volunteers. With regard to his sledge journey on the inland ice, Dr. Cook says:

"I do not expect to prolong the southern sledge journey more than three months. On this journey the glacial phenomena, snow and ice formation will be carefully studied. Many other important meteorological and geological observations may be made. A very novel investigation, and one to which I expect to devote a great deal of attention, is the antarctic ice cap, which, perhaps, is nearly 3,000 miles in diameter and probably nearly circular in form; its thickness is a problematical matter, and has been a subject of much theorizing by scientific men."
